Who We Are

The African Centre for International Law is dedicated to the study, teaching, public understanding, and practical use of international law in Africa.

We work to make international law more accessible, useful, and connected to African realities.

Why We Exist

International law should not remain confined to courts, universities, diplomatic spaces, and expert circles.

It should also be understood, questioned and used by the people and communities whose lives are shaped by it.

ACIL

Law Closer to People

Through research, education, advocacy, and engagement with African and international legal systems, we work to bring international law closer to people.

Our programs aim to make international law easier to understand, question, and use in the pursuit of justice and accountability in Africa.
